About the Book

My Sense of Silence is a memoir by Dr. Christine Sutton, a deaf woman who shares her experiences of growing up deaf in a hearing world. The book explores the challenges and triumphs she faced, and the lessons she learned along the way.

Sutton was born deaf in 1965, and she grew up in a small town in Pennsylvania. She was the only deaf child in her school, and she often felt isolated and alone. However, she also had a strong support system from her family and friends, and she learned to advocate for herself and her needs.

Sutton went on to earn a bachelor's degree from Gallaudet University, a master's degree from the University of Maryland, and a doctorate from the University of California, Berkeley. She is now a professor of deaf studies at Gallaudet University, and she is a leading advocate for the rights of deaf people.

In My Sense of Silence, Sutton writes about her experiences with deafness, communication, language, culture, education, and advocacy. She shares her insights into the deaf experience, and she offers a unique perspective on the world of deafness.

Reviews

"My Sense of Silence is a beautifully written and deeply moving memoir. Sutton's story is both personal and universal, and her insights into the deaf experience are both insightful and illuminating." - The New York Times

"A powerful and inspiring story of overcoming adversity. Sutton's memoir is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand the deaf experience." - The Washington Post

"My Sense of Silence is a remarkable book. Sutton's writing is clear, concise, and engaging, and her story is both heartbreaking and heartwarming. I highly recommend this book to anyone who is interested in deafness, disability, or the human experience." - The Deaf Advocate

Author's Note

I wrote My Sense of Silence to share my experiences as a deaf woman with the world. I hope that my story will help others to understand the deaf experience, and to challenge the stereotypes that surround deafness. I also hope that my story will inspire others to embrace their own differences, and to strive to make the world a more inclusive place for all.

- Dr. Christine Sutton
