She retreats to her childhood home in the countryside, seeking solace in the familiar surroundings of her past.

As Jane slowly begins to piece her life back together, she finds comfort in the simple pleasures of life: the smell of freshly baked bread, the sound of birds singing in the trees, and the warmth of the sun on her skin. She also finds solace in her memories of her husband, and in the love and support of her family and friends.

A Conversation with the Author

Q: What inspired you to write The Sweet Smell of Home?

A: I wrote The Sweet Smell of Home as a way to process my own grief after the death of my husband. I wanted to share my story with others who have experienced loss, to let them know that they are not alone and that there is hope and healing to be found.

Q: What do you hope readers will take away from your book?

A: I hope that readers will find comfort and inspiration in my story. I want them to know that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope and healing to be found. I also hope that my book will help to break down the stigma surrounding grief and loss, and that it will encourage people to talk about their experiences.

Q: What are some of the lessons you learned on your journey?

A: I learned the importance of self-care, forgiveness, and gratitude. I also learned that it is important to allow yourself to grieve at your own pace, and that there is no right or wrong way to do so. I also learned that even though grief never truly goes away, it does get easier to manage over time.
