The novel follows the story of Anya, a young woman who has always felt like an outsider. She is the daughter of a Russian immigrant and an American father, and she has never felt like she truly belongs in either world. After her father dies, Anya decides to travel to Russia to learn more about her heritage. But her journey is not as simple as she had hoped. She encounters prejudice and discrimination, and she struggles to find her place in a country that is both familiar and foreign.

As Anya travels through Russia, she begins to question her own identity. Who is she? Is she Russian? American? Both? Neither? And where does she truly belong? These are questions that Anya must answer for herself, and her journey is ultimately one of self-discovery and acceptance.
